

Capabilities

By the end of this course, the students will be capable for:

- Make an educated guess about stability and reactivity of a given compound, based on electron counting rules
- Propose reasonable mechanisms for many organometallic-catalyzed reactions
- Use steric and electronic arguments to predict how changes in reactants, metal or ligands affect the outcome of reactions
- Read a current research paper, understand and explain its content and importance